I was anxious, however, to withdraw my mere human nature from participation in these herbaccous advantages; looking about for some shelter that might preserve me from the mischiefs of the shower, without depriving me of its refreshing fragrance, I espied in the centre of the Plats-a square of no mighty area-a low, rotunda-like building, with slated roof, overhanging and resting upon wood-en pillars, so as to form a sort of covered walk. I settled with myself that this was the mar k-t-house of the town, and hastened to besiege so desirable a city of refuge. But during my rapid approach, I observed that the external walls of the nameless edifice beneath the arcade were covered, and without a single intersticial interval, by small pictures in oil colors, equal in size, and equal in demerit, and each and all representing some calamitous erists of human exstence-s fire, a Bilpwreck, a boatwreck, a battle, a leprosy! It occurred to me at the same oment, that this gallery of mortal casualtics and afflictions must be a collection of votive offerings, and that the seeming market house was probably a shrine of especial sanctity. And so t was -the shrine of "The Black Lady of Altenotting."

Instigated by somewhat more than a travel. ler's vague curiosity, I entered the chapel; the brilliancy of which, eternally illuminated by the reflection of a profusion of ailver lamps upon the thousand precious objects which decorate the walls, forms a startling contract with the dim shadows of the external arcade. In most cases, the entrance to a religious edifice impresses the mind with a consciousness of vastness, and a sensation of awe-

But the chapel of the Biack Virgin is communicative as a boundor, and yet retains the usual character of latening and awful stillness, the ordinary impression of local sanctity. I thank thee for the summer skies and the green pastures—for the footsteps which no longer crave a helping hand-for the restor ed faces of -my beloved ones-and, above all, O holiest Virgin! I glorify thy name in gratitude for the precious means by which the blessing of sight hath been again vouchsafed me!"

This last mode of expression excited my cu riosity, and when the little group of votaries had concluded their ceremonies, had fixed their con-secrated tapers at the shrine, and deposited their oblations with its officiating priests, I followed their Joyful footsteps out of the chapel, and was again struck by the delicious transitions from the heated and incense-laden atmosphere of its interior, to the pure, balmy, April air, without, gushing with the sweetness of the passing

The ceremonies of the day were still far from their conclusion. The historical painter of Alenotting was in attendance in the areade, bearng the votive picture which was to pernetuate as I could observe or ascertain of the saccrdotal hangman of the consecrated gallery, the oldest and most weather-stained of the pictures, was made to vield precedence to the new comer .--Having profitted by a stranger's privilege, and the English garb, which is held sacred as a herald's tabard in many a foreign land, to unite my self to the little group, and address some casual inquiries to its frank and overjoyous members -old Philipp Streer, himself the hero of the day, deigned to take the picture from the hands of the sacristan, and to ciceronize for my special edification. I trust his restored vision was not yet sufficiently acute to admit of his noting the smile which, in spite of my better will, stole over my face, as I contemplated the phenomenon of bad taste and worse execution, which he thrust upon my observation. PHILADELPHIA:

THURSDAY EVENING, DEC. 3, 1829.

We have received, from Messrs. E. Lit TELL & BROTHER, a copy of the Youth'. Keepsake, a very neat volume, published at Borron, and designed for a present to young people. The editors inform us, in a preface, that their plan has been to provide not only for the amusement and instruction of children, but to add something that may exercise the understandings of those who " are beginning to be men or women."-The contents of the volume are all original; applied generally by writers who are already advantageously known. The engravngs are all from pleasing designs, and so executed that young persons may admire them without danger of forming a false taste. The Excuse Annuals, generally, we observe, are offered for sale by Messrs. Lar-TRLL; who also announce their intention of speedily publishing, in two volumes, a seection of the most valuable of their contents. This, we have no doubt, will prove universally acceptable.

The Antiquery and John of Paris are to be given to-night, at the Chesnut street theatre, for the henefit of Mrs. PRARMAN. The enter. tainment is one which all who are sincerely fund of music, and who wish that it should be succalled on to patronise. BOYELDIEU's opera, as performed by Mr. PRATT's company, has won for the establishment as much approbation as any piece produced within our recollection though, doubtless, Tom and Jerry was much more profitable. The music of the Antiquary has been selected with great taste; and every part in the drama was well acted even on the first night. Mrs. PEARMAN has merit which should be richly rewarded. The first volume of the work spoken of in the unnexed notice has been published at Bosrow, by Monnon and FRANCIS, and is for sale, in this city, at the store of Mr. Donson, Chesnut street. It is an elegant specimen of typogra-phy, but we are not yet prepared to give an opinion of its literary value. Alluding to a work which is to form one of the promised series, the author says that, should this appear, "all military men will know that the writer must have seen much active service. To his few much viving fellow-soldiers his anecdotes and skutches may be interesting. But to conceal his name from them will be indeed a task."

tion of the JOURNAL OF COMMERCE:

The advices from Constantinople are to the 22th of September. An article of that datafrom Pera, published in the French papers, says that the Porte will probably find a difficulty in paying Russin the stipulated indomnition, and that the question will arise whether the grapt, lowers will advance money to the Porte, or suffer the Russians to occupy the provinces until the expenses of the war are paid. In the latter case not only might the Sultan find it difficult to recover his authority in those territories, but would besides be deprived of a portion of the revenues that would enable him to pay the sums promised. The Rois Effendi, it is said, had very early given the French and English Subsequent to understand, that the Porte depended on their governments for pecuniary assistance, but had not received from them any satisfactory reply. The object of Halil Pacha's mission to but had not received from them any satisfactory reply. The object of Halil Pacha's mission to the Emperor of Russia, is said to be to passuade him that it is impossible for Turkey to pay the contributions. Great expectations are enter-tained of the success of this envoy, and that the Emperor will consent to renounce the indemni-ty of 11,000 ducats. Halil Pacha has taken with him to St. Patersburgh a cloak of emine, with an agraffe of diamonds, for the Emperor, and ten Turkish shawls adorned with pearls and brilliants for the Empress.

The London Times of the 27th contains the reparate act of the Rassian and Turkish-treaty which regards the principalities. The Mospodars of Moldavia and Wallachia, instead of which regards the principalities. The Hospodars of Moldavia and Wallachia, instead of being appointed, as formedy, for seven years, are to be invested with that dignity for life, except in ease of resignation or expedien for crimes. They are to govern the principalities without interference from the Ports. The Ports surrenders every thing on the left bank of the Danube. Establishments of troops may be kept up by the Hospodars, independent of the Sultan. The Turkish government relinquishes all claim to those contributions in kind which it has hitherto received from the principalities, and is to be allowed, instead, an annual tribute in money, the amount of which is to be determined hereafter, and to commence two years after the total evacuation of the principalities by the Russian troops. Laborers are never to be demanded by the Ports from these provinces for any forced service as formerly. The inhabitants of the principalities are to be allowed unulimited freedom of trade, without hindrance or restraint, except from their own government. Finally, the Porte binds itself to confirm every administrative measure which the Russians may have adopted during their tenure of the principalities.

With reference to the quarter from whence it comes, many will, ne doubt, be ready to attach a very high degree of political importance to it, and draw very large inferences from its tone and sentiment upon the exceedingly delicate questions upon which the writer touches. Many, indeed, will be ready enough to regard a publication of this kind as tantamount to drawing aside the veil of Russian policy, exhibiting its

If, instead of being a mere newspaper production—a random insertion, possibly, of some random thoughts—it could be fairly assumed as the work of a State Functionary, and its centences read as having been turned with diplomatic nicety, there might be some ground for interpreting the recorded alarms of the Adriano-politics at the top early departure of their friendpolites at the toe early departure of their friend-y invaders, and the disappointment of the Ru-melians at the moderation of the Emperor in not taking them permanently under his protection as the manifestation of as strong a wish on the one side for such a consummation, as of a wil

At day-break the rapid course of the clouds to the N. W., and blew with increasing fury, so that we were exposed to the whole violence of the sea was inundated to a depth of which we do not remember any former instance. Happily, the ebb set in just at the time of the storm, so that after the first fury of the waves was broken the waters subsided; but not without having damaged a great quantity of goods in the magazines and warehouses, which were so unexpectedly overflowed. Our fears for the shipe at anchor were not soon dispelled, for the sea was in the most violent agitation with the raging of the storm from 8 in the merming till 4 in the afternoon. The chief damage sustained is reduced to the following:—The Augerican brig Zarnor, which lays at anchor at the mouth of the channel, had her chain-cables broken, and ran foul of a bark, and the English brigantine Gambia broke her chain cable and was driven by the wind to the Squero Panili, and damaged a small ho wind to the Squero Panili, and damaged a small house against which she struck. But it is said that the riches contained in the Sersglio are far beyond any estimate, of which we have a clear conception. The revenues of the Turkish Empire have been very great, and the expenditure comparatively triding; hence the funds of the Sersglio must be ring; hence the lunds of the sergion must overy great, on account of their having been accumulating for several centuries. Unlike other wates, the precious metals that were once deposited in the scoret recesses of the Seraglia were suffered to remain there, and never broken in upon, this was the Sanctum Sanctorum of the Musculanae, in the midst of resolutions if was upon; this was the Banefum Sanctorum of the Musualmans; in the midst of revolutions it was he lit inviolably sacred, and thus the Sultan is not likely to be much distressed by the payment of the above-mentioned sum; besides which he has the rich Jews and Armenians under his Alaghar, from whom he never fails to drain heavy contributions. The Franks are very rarely, perhaps never disturbed; under the Turkish despotism they enjoy almost unbounded freedom.—Since the Russian Army has decided on wintering at Advisoople; in sonsequence of a plague which is af present raging with great virulence in some of the Turkish districts through which that army would have to pass, and moreover it which is af present raging with great virulence in some of the Turkish districts through which that army would have to pass, and moreover it now being almost too late in the season to think of crossing the Balkan, there is a probability that Count Heyden's departure from the Mediterra-nean will be delayed until the ensuing spring. RETURN OF THE SANTA PE CARAVAN.
Accounts from the West represent that a detachment of Major Rijey's command had arrived on the frontier, and reported that the Fall Caravan was on the return, having made a successful adventure. They say that an escort of 200 mounted Mexicans attended the Caravan from Santa Fe to the Arkansas river, and was the means of saving it, having sustained and repulsed repeated attacks from the Camanches, in the course of which seven or eight Mexicans were killed. From the Arkansas, at which place Major Riley was waiting, the Mexican escort, which was a voluntear was, membedy returned to their own country. Major Riley, who, it will be recollected, was detached by order of the President last spring with four companies of the U. S. troops, to protect the spring Caravan going out, as far as our limits would permit him to go, and to wait for the returning, or Fall Caravan, had spent the summer at Chouteau's Island, so called from the signal repulse of seven or eight hundred Pausness, by one Mr. Chouteau with twenty odd men, some years ago. It is reported that saveral of his men were killed by the Pausness during the summer, and his hories, mules and work exen, all stolen by them; and that he is now on his return, in company with the Caravan, the detachment sent in having sent for supplies and transfer all stolen by them; and that he is now on his return, in company with the Caravan, the detachment sent in having sent for supplies and transportation.—Such are the reports which have the appearance of being, substantially, correct.—It is believed that without the aid of the escort granted by President Jackson, and the volunteer Mozicans, the Caravan would have suffered severely from robbery and murder, and that this inland breach of trade, so essential to the West from the return of gold and silver which it affords, must have been broken up. President Jackson has saved it this year by doing all that he could,—granting an escort of Infantry;—let properly equipping that escort. Willard Adams, well known in this city as a stage and steamboat runner, jumped from a second story window in South Market street on Friday, and was so much injured that he soon died. He had been confined fer some days, with illness, and performed this last sad act, in a violent delirium. He talked much about Sam Patch, and shortly before he leaped, was heard to say that he could do some things as well as that noted character.—Albany Dai. A.iv.

AWFUL DEATH.—On Menday morning, as two ladies were distributing Tracts, in the upper part of Main street, they came to the house of Mrs. Monks. The front door was shut, and no one invited them to come in. A black man standing near, directed them to another door, which they entered. But all was silent. They were about to leave the house, when they noticed that the chimney piece had recently been on fire, and en looking to the hearth they noticed the appearance, and a few remains of a human being —On closer inspection, they were found to inte, and en looking to the hearth they noticed the appearance, and a few remains of a human being — On closer inspection, they were found to be the ashes of Mrz. Monks. Her body had been almost completely consumed by fire. A foot and a part of an arm were the principal remains that identified the ashes, and marked the spot where she was burned, most probably 'a living sacrifice' to intexication. She had lived alone, for several months past, kept a little grocery, in which the principal article was whiskey, and for some time, had been in habits of intemperance. Whether she fell upon the hearth, in a state of intebriety, or in a fit, cannot be determined. But her end is a colemn warning to all who indulge in the use of ardent spirits. The circumstance of her being so entirely consumed, can be accounted for, only by her system having become highly inflammable by the excessive use of alcohol.—New-Yev-York Luminary.

SAM PATCH.—There was a story current yeaterday that a geatleman from New York had seen and conversed, in that city, with this distinguished individual, a few days ago. It is stated that he had, previous to his jump, discovered an eddy which ran under a shelving rock, and beneath which one could securely and comfortably rest, unseen by any. To this place he is said to have conveyed a suit of dry clothes, a bottle of Santa Cruz, and perhaps semething to eat. When he made his jump, instead of rising in sight of the crowd, he passed under the rock, and there remained until after dark, when he came out and made his way incog, to the east.
This story may go for what it is worth. Many
